MRS. DE PEYSTER FIELD GIVES AN OUT-

ING TO WOMEN AND CHILDREN. A delightful excursion, in which almost five hundred participated, was given by Mrs. Courtland de Peysier Field on Memorial Day. The party left the end of East Nineteenth-st. at 9:30 o'clock and went to Stony Point on the Hudson. Many of the mothers of the East Side, in whom Mrs. Field is interested, were there with their little ones, and nearly all of the members of the Girls' Guild of Grace Church were present. Miss S. I. Carson, who has charge of Christodora House, the head-quarters of the Young Women's Settlement, was present with a delegation of girls from the Margaret Sangster and the Loyalty clubs, and they enlivened the dull moments with their club ories and the songs of their alma mater, as they consider Christodore. Mrs. Stickney, Mrs. Field's sister, gave several recitations, and when she had finished the girls cheered her and sang a number of selections.

An abundant luncheon was served, and the way the ice-cream disappeared made a woman remark that she never saw such an exhibition of cold storage facilities Everybody seemed happy. The Rev. Dr. Warren Everybody seemed happy. The Rev. Dr. Warren and the Rev. Mr. Cook were present and conducted a service of song, and Mrs. Field delivered a brief address, after which the excursionists sang "Get Away from the Shore, Launch Out." There was a stop of two hours duration made at Stony Point. On the return trip the Epworth Lengue boat was passed, and the passengers on each vessel waved salutes and joined in the singing of "There is Sunshine in My Soul To-Day."

As the boat neared the pier the Guild girls sang "My Country. The Med. White and Blue." A vote of thanks was tendered to Mrs. Field and her sister by the excursionists before they left the boat.

It was decided to issue a new appeal, to be companied by a copy of the correspondence of the ommittee with the Government, and it was also voted that the new advisory committee of physi-

HORACE MANN GRADUATES.

EDUCATION AND PATRIOTISM ARE COM-BINED.

DR. RUSSELL SAYS THAT THOUGH MEN ARE THEIR PHYSICAL SUPERIORS WOMEN EXCEL IN MORAL ISSUES.

The commencement exercises of the Horace Mann School took place yesterday morning in Me-morial Chapel, a large attendance of the friends of the students and school being present. Upon the platform were seated Dean Russell, of Teachers' College; ex-President Hervey, of Teachers' College; Virgil Prettyman, principal of the school the Rev. Dr. Harsha, Professors Baker, Dodge, Churchill, Woodhull, Runyan, Kinne, Woolman and others. The graduating class occupied the front seats of the auditorium, the young women being dressed in the dainty muslin gowns beloved of girl graduates the world over. After an organ prelude by Mr. Viehl, head of the music department of the school, Dr. W. J. Harsha led in prayer, and Principal Prettyman led the audience in a responsive Scripture reading. Several appropriate hymns were sung, and then Dr. Wakter L. Hervey delivered an appropriate address on "Edu-cation and Patriotism. He took for his text the following inscription, which was prepared by President Eliot for the Water Gate at the World's Fair:

To the brave settlers who levelled forests, cleared fields, made paths by land and water, and planted commonwealths. To the brave women who in solitude, amid strange dangers and heavy toil, reared families and made homes. To the proneers of civil and religious liberty.

But bolder they who first off-cast
Their moorings from the habitable past, And ventured chartless on the sea of storm-engendering liberty.

With men by culture trained and fortified Conscience my sceptre is, and law my sword. We here highly resolve that government of the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

"These are noble words, about noble deeds, done by noble men," said Dr. Hervey, "and I think it was a happy thought to place side by sid the words of 'the first American' and those of the poet who first called him so. My first point is that no one can be truly patriotic without having a deep, real, abiding interest in the stories of pa triots the world over, and especially in those 'who first explored, through pertls manifold, the shores lakes and rivers, mountains, valleys and plains of this new world.' Yet as civilization advances the explorer becomes extinct, physical hardships di-minish, and even the soldier will be less and less in demand; for civilization on its political side means, as John Fiske asserts and as our own history proves, 'the graded substitution of a state of peace for a state of war.' Patriotism then assumes a different form. A man may be plucky without being patriotic, and most of us must be as a man is a hero who remains vigilant when it is easier to go to sleep, who stands up for prin ciple in the face of the 'boss' and the 'boys.' tion and patriotism must therefore go hand in hand. For the essential thing in an education is this: that it gives the power to see moral issues, moral means to moral ends. Those who have not this power may be schooled, disciplined, instructed, informed, but they are not educated. "There are two calls that to-day come to us, as seventh-st, recently, and found her radiant with

There are two calls that to-day come to us, as patriots seeking to discern moral issues and to attain moral ends. The first call comes from our city. If she were beleaguered, if some enemy were off Sandy Hook at this moment, she could not be in worse case than she is to-day, and has been for months. She called for help when the enemy began operations against her, but those who might have been her defenders proved not to be such. Our city will call again. What hope is there that she will not then call in value only this, as I believe: That the educated men and women of the Commonwealth will see the issues involved, will with hot from several times are that reaches be from many directions cheers and, as she says, "helps her over the hard places." Before the presentation of the diplomas Russell related an "ower-true tale" with a moral "In the time of Ferdinand and Isabella great at- He said that not so many years ago a college professor close at hand was sent for to go to a address to a graduating class. Preparing an able and effective address, he repaired to the scene of action. He found the hall in which the exercises and effective address, he repaired to the scene of action. He found the hall in which the exercises were to take place profusely decorated with flowers, while over the platform appeared the encouraging motto, "We've Reached the Top." Still studying the problem of what one school had achieved, he was stunned to learn that the graduating class was composed of one lone girl, who had just completed the eighth grade. In closing this receital, Dean Russell suggested to the class before him that if this idea had taken possession of their minds it would be well to disabuse themselves of it at once. The singing of "America," the henediction and an organ postude closed the exercises, after which congratulations were in order.

The graduates who received the school diplomas were the Misses Margaret Elliman, Eleanore Van Cott, Alice Wilde and Hugo Kratzenstein. The special students who will enter college in the autumn and after a year's work will receive the Horace Mann School diploma are Miss Linda Dows and Myer Friedland, Henry Harris, Malcolm Silver Taylor, James Bassett, Arthur Feust, Clifford Gray, Thomas Hogan, Joseph Jones, Mosea Rosenbluth, Frank Sewall and David Smyth. Of these students five are planning to enter Teachers College, eight Columbia, four the School of Mines, Columbia; one Frinceton, one Vassar and one Harvard.

A reception was tendered the graduating class in the evening.

PLAIN AND CHOCOLATE AND ORANGE JUM-BLES

English jumbles are delicious old-fashioned cake similar to cookies. They are always acceptable with tea, and may be appropriately served with berries and biscuits at simple country-house lunch-

Plain jumbles made with sour milk are excellent. This rule may be welcome to those housekeepers who are often at a loss in warm weather to know of any good way of using a small quantity of milk which has become sour.

To make these jumbles, cream a cupful of butter and two cupfuls of sugar. Beat five eggs, whites and yolks together, then mix them into the creamed butter and sugar. Stir a tenspoonful of soda thoroughly through a cupful of thick, sour milk. Turn the milk and soda into the creamed butter, sugar and eggs. Stir enough flour through this mixture to make a soft dough, which can be easily rolled out. Flour the breadboard well, and turn out on it a tablespoonful of dough at a time dredge it lightly, roll it out thin with a floured rolling pin. Dip the cutters used into flour and cut the dough into cakes. Place these cakes into buttered baking pans and bake them in a hot oven until nicely browned. If you wish, you may flavor them with lemon.

MARBLED JUMBLES.

Fancy jumbles, sometimes called marbled jumbles, are made as follows: Beat a cupful of butter and two cupfuls of sugar to a cream; add four well-beaten eggs. When the batter has been well stirred, add three scant cupfuls of sifted flour into which two heaping teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one-half a teaspoonful of sait—if the butter is fresh—have been stirred. When the ingredients are thoroughly mixed and the dough is free from humps, separate it into two parts. Add one cupful of grated chocolate, which has been melted to a paste, to one part, and to the other add the juice and greated peel of an orange.

Stir these two parts together just enough to give a marbied effect. Turn the dough out on a floured board and roll it thin in the same way that the plain jumbles made with sour milk were rolled out.

Chocolate jumbles can be made by this rule, adding a little more chocolate and leaving out the orange, and orange jumbles are also made in the same manner, by adding more orange flavoring and omitting the chocolate. bles, are made as follows: Beat a cupful of

The fire upon the hearth is low.

And there is stillness everywhere;
Like troubled spirits, here and there
The firelight shadows fluttering go.
And as the shadows round me creep,
A children treble breaks the gloom,
And softly from a father room
Comes: "Now I lay me down to sleep."

And, somehow, with that little prayer
And that sweet treble in my ears,
My thought goes back to distant years
And lingers with a dear one there.
And, as I hear the child's amen,
My mother's faith comes back to me,
Couched at her side I seem to be,
And mother holds my hands again.

Oh! for an hour in that dear place!

Unless Uncle Sam's present conflict with Spain should come to an end in the near future, one of the flags that will go to the front will be made by the hands of Syrian women. These women are members of a society calling itself the Daughters of Syria, and as they wish in some way to show their interest in the welfare of their adopted country, they have decided that there would be no more fitting way of doing it than by presenting a flag to one of the regiments. RE-ELECTION OF LADY HENRY

REPORT OF THE ANNUAL COUNCIL OF THE B. W. T. A.

THE LEADER MADE PRESIDENT FOR THE

EIGHTH TIME-TRIBUTES PAID TO MISS WILLARD AT THE CONVENTION.

The full report of the annual meeting of the British Woman's Temperance Association, which was held in Queen's Hall, London, has just reached the United States. It has already been announce that Lady Henry Somerset was re-elected to the presidency. Of her the "Union Signal" says:

"No more splendid spectacle was ever seen than the personal attitude of Lady Henry in the two campaigns that have tried her soul. The first was when, after her visit to America, she advocated the broadening of the British Woman's Temperance Association toward the do-everything policy, and the movement was characterized by those opposed is a 'monstrous attempt at Americanizing Britain. Lady Henry believed the changes to be vital to the progress of the society, and she would not voluntarily abandon them. Invited by a majority of the Executive Committee to resign, she refused. But when, during the last year, she herself became the disturbing element, she refused to serve or to stand for re-election, not because women entertained different views from hers, but she would not remain a personal point of variance. Lady Henry possesses in a marked degree the ability to distinguish between persons and principles."

The withdrawal of Lady Henry from the position she took on the Indian Army matters, after she became convinced that her view of the subject was an erroneous one, secured to herself and her cause many new supporters.

In her address at the Convention in London she spoke of resigning the post as president, when the delegates rose en masse and expressed their regard and loyalty with enthusiasm. She also alluded to the fact that it was the eighth time she had come before the association in the character of its presi-

"I stand," "The Union Signal" quotes her as saying, "as I always have stood, for the prohibition of the liquor traffic by the will of the people. I have never changed my position on that subject. I am not here to contradict vain rumors that I have ever advocated a dual basis in our work, for I have always stood for the principle of total ab-stinence.

Lady Henry's words, expressing the thought that "Miss Willard was great because she was the embodiment of love itself," were listened to with the deepest attention.
